Staying Connected

Though in-person interactions are on hold, video conferencing gives us the ability to still meet “face-to-face” with clients and colleagues to discuss title insurance, customer service needs and more.

Here are a few video conferencing services to help you stay connected.

Google Hangouts

For G Suite customers, Google Hangouts Meet allows up to 250 participants on a call, live streaming for up to 100,000 viewers in a domain, and recordable meetings that can be saved to Google Drive.

A Zoom no-cost Basic account lets you host up to 100 participants for 40-minute meetings and one-on-one meetings with no time restriction. You can also use direct and team messaging with Zoom Chat.

A paid Pro account eliminates the time restriction and gives you access to additional features and controls.

Part of Office 365, Microsoft Teams is free and gives you and your team the ability to manage workflows, instant message and host team meetings with ease.

GoToMeeting

The no-cost version of GoToMeeting offers the ability to host 40-minute meetings for up to three participants, including screen sharing, in-meeting chat and mobile or browser-based meetings.

Paid plans offer additional features starting with a jump to 150 participants at the Professional plan level. The Enterprise plan accommodates up to 3,000 participants with no time limits.

No-cost WebEx conferencing allows up to 100 participants on one call and enables call in for audio with no time restrictions on calls.

A free 14-day trial lets you test drive Join.Me's audio-video web conferencing and screen-sharing capabilities.

SECURITY ALERT!

Sharing public meeting links leaves you vulnerable to cyber-criminals. KEEP YOUR MEETING LINKS PRIVATE and use pass codes if your video conferencing service offers it. You also should change the automatic meeting settings to prevent participants from being able to share their own screens.

STAY CONNECTED AND PLEASE STAY SAFE!
